Exploring One-Cut Lettuce Production

Join WSU Clark County Extension at the 78th St. Heritage Farm to view a trial of one-cut type lettuce varieties.

One-cut varieties were developed as an alternative to standard baby-leaf lettuce production. The fully mature head can be harvested for baby-leaf mixes due to the small, uniform, abundant leaves they produce. They can also be alternatively marketed as a unique head lettuce. Eighteen total Eazyleaf®, Multileaf®, and Salanova® varieties will be on display, and company representatives will be present to discuss the selections with attendees.

WSU is trialing these varieties to evaluate in-detail what unique options one-cut lettuces might offer growers in contrast to standard baby-leaf production methods.

PROGRAM FEATURES:

- Variety viewing and discussion of the trial
- Discussion about variety offerings for one-cut types
- Time for open discussion on lettuce production methods and markets
- Lettuce tastings with salads created by McClaskey Culinary Institute students (at Clark College)
- Refreshments and snacks
- Opportunity for networking
